

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

STEVE WICKENS, individually and on behalf of others similarly situated,

Plaintiff,

vs.

Blue Cross of California, Inc., d/b/a
Anthem Blue Cross; Anthem Blue
Cross Life and Health Insurance Company,

Defendants.

CASE NO. 15cv834-GPC(JMA)

ORDER REMANDING CASE TO STATE COURT

Before the Court is an order to show cause why the case should not be remanded for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. (Dkt. No. 22.) Defendants filed a response on July 2, 2015. (Dkt. No. 23.) Plaintiff filed a reply on July 10, 2015. (Dkt. No. 24.) Based on the reasoning below, the Court REMANDS the case to state court for lack of subject matter jurisdiction.

Discussion

On March 16, 2015, Plaintiff Steve Wickens ("Plaintiff") filed a class action complaint against Defendants Blue Cross of California Inc. d/b/a Anthem Blue Cross; and Anthem Blue Cross Life and Health Insurance Company in San Diego Superior Court for state law causes of action based on Defendants' failure to secure and safeguard Plaintiff's personal identifying information.

According to the complaint, on February 4, 2015, Anthem, Inc., a related entity,

1 announced that cyber hackers had gained unauthorized access to its information
 2 technology system exposing the name, personal information, birthday, Social Security 3 number, health care ID number, income data, employment data, street address, email 4 address, and other personal details of about 80 million current and former customers 5 and employees. (Dkt. No. 1-2, Compl. ¶ 4.) The class action complaint alleges causes 6 of action for breach of contract, violation of the California Records Act, violation of 7 the California unfair competition laws, negligence, invasion of privacy, public 8 disclosure of private facts, and unjust enrichment. (Dkt. No. 1-2, Compl.)

9 On April 15, 2015, Defendants removed the case to this Court under the Class 10 Action Fairness Act, (“CAFA”). (Dkt. No. 1, Notice of Removal at 6.) On April 24, 11 2015, the case was transferred to the undersigned judge pursuant to the low number 12 rule. See Local Civ. R. 40.1. (Dkt. No. 7.) On May 5, 2015, Plaintiff filed a motion 13 to remand. (Dkt. No. 8.) On May 7, 2015, Defendants filed a motion to stay, or in the 14 alternative, for an extension of time to respond pending ruling on transfer motion 15 pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1407.¹ (Dkt. No. 11.)

16 On June 18, 2015, the Court denied Plaintiff’s motion to remand and granted 17 Plaintiff leave to file an amended complaint, and denied Defendants’ motion to stay as 18 moot.² (Dkt. No. 20.) The Court concluded that while Defendants demonstrated that 19 there was minimal diversity to support CAFA jurisdiction because Plaintiff alleged 20 “residents” of California in the class description, the Court granted Plaintiff leave to 22 ¹28 U.S.C. § 1407 provides in relevant parts, “(a) When civil actions involving 23 one or more common questions of fact are pending in different districts, such actions 24 may be transferred to any district for coordinated or consolidated pretrial proceedings.

 25 Such transfers shall be made by the judicial panel on multidistrict litigation authorized by this section upon its determination that transfers for such proceedings will be for the convenience of parties and witnesses and will promote the just and efficient conduct of such actions.” 28 U.S.C. § 1407.

26 ²During the pendency of the motions, on June 8, 2015, the United States 27 Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation (“JPML”) in the case of In Re: Anthem, Inc.
 28 Customer Data Security Breach Litigation transferred 16 cases to the United States District Court for the Northern District of California and assigned the case to District Judge Luch H. Koh for coordinated or consolidated pretrial proceedings pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1407. (MDL Case No. 2617, Dkt. No. 262.)

1 amend the complaint to change the term “residents” of California to “citizens” of 2 California in the class description. (Id. at 9.) While citizenship of the plaintiff class 3 is determined on the date the case became removable, the Court concluded that the 4 change from “resident” to “citizens” of California constituted a clarification and not an 5 amendment. (Id. at 11.)

6 On June 19, 2015, Plaintiff filed an amended complaint changing the term 7 “residents” to “citizens” in the class description. (Dkt. No. 21.) On June 22, 2015, the 8 Court set an order to show cause hearing why the case should not be remanded for lack 9 of subject matter jurisdiction. (Dkt. No. 22.) Defendants present two arguments in 10 response.

11 A. Complete Preemption

12 First, Defendants argue the Court has subject matter jurisdiction because the 13 breach of contract claim is completely preempted by the exclusive civil enforcement 14 provisions of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (“ERISA”) because 15 Plaintiff is insured under an ERISA plan. Plaintiff opposes arguing that Defendants’ 16 new allegation of federal question is untimely and not proper. Moreover, even if the 17 Court considered the preemption argument, it is without merit since the claims assert 18 an independent legal duty irrespective of the ERISA plan.

19 1. Timeliness of New Allegation

20 The Ninth Circuit has held that a defendant must state the basis for removal 21 jurisdiction in the petition for removal which must be filed within thirty days of 22 receiving the complaint. O’Halloran v. Univ. of Washington, 856 F.2d 1375, 1381 (9th 23 Cir. 1988) (citing Barrow Dev. Co. v. Fulton Ins. Co., 418 F.2d 316, 317 (9th Cir.
 24 1969) (denying leave to amend the removal petition because a removal petition cannot 25 be thereafter amended to allege substantial changes and can only be amended to clarify 26 “‘defective allegations’ of jurisdiction previously made”)).

27 Here, the notice of removal was timely filed on April 15, 2015. (Dkt. No. 1, 28 Notice of Removal ¶¶ 9-10.) Defendants removed the action under CAFA. (Id. ¶ 14.)

Defendants now raise a new argument not raised in the notice of removal that the Court has subject matter jurisdiction under ERISA. Based on the cases cited, Defendants cannot now raise a new basis for the Court's federal jurisdiction. Defendants' argument as to ERISA preemption is without merit.

2. Merits of Complete Preemption

Even if the Court were to consider Defendants' preemption argument, it still does not demonstrate that the Court has subject matter jurisdiction. Defendants argue that the express and implied breach of contract claim are completely preempted³ by ERISA as the claim seeks to enforce rights under an ERISA plan. Plaintiff contends that his claims assert generally that when an entity acquires private personal information of an individual, it has a duty to safeguard that information.

§ 502(a)(1)(B) of ERISA provides:

A civil action may be brought—(1) by a participant or beneficiary—. . . (B) to recover benefits due to him under the terms of his plan, to enforce his rights under the terms of the plan, or to clarify his rights to future benefits under the terms of the plan.

29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(1)(B). ERISA's preemption clause states that ERISA "shall supersede any and all State laws insofar as they may now or hereafter relate to any employee benefit plan" 29 U.S.C. § 1144(a). The purpose of ERISA is to provide a uniform regulatory regime over employee benefit plans. Aetna Health Inc. v. Davila, 542 U.S. 200, 208 (2004)

The Ninth Circuit has adopted the two-prong "complete preemption" test asserted in Davila. Marin Gen. Hosp. v. Modesto & Empire Traction Co., 581 F.3d 941, 946 (9th Cir. 2009). "Under Davila, a state-law cause of action is completely preempted if (1) 'an individual, at some point in time, could have brought [the] claim ³Defendants do not affirmatively assert they are arguing complete preemption but because they cite to Aetna Health Inc. v. Davila, 542 U.S. 200, 208 (2004), the Court assumes they are asserting complete preemption as opposed to conflict preemption. See Marin Gen. Hosp. v. Modesto & Empire Traction Co., 581 F.3d 941, 944-45 (9th Cir. 2009) (noting a clear difference and different jurisdictional consequences that result between the two kinds of preemption).

1 under ERISA § 502(a)(1)(B),’ and (2) ‘where there is no other independent legal duty
2 that is implicated by a defendant’s actions.’” Id. (quoting Davila, 542 U.S. at 210.) A 3 state law cause of action is preempted by § 1132(a)(1)(B) only if both prongs of the test 4 are satisfied. Id. at 947.

5 While Defendants cite to Davila, they do not address the two prong test.
6 Plaintiff addresses the two prong test although the argument on the first prong does not 7 address the issue of whether Plaintiff could have brought the claim under § 8 502(a)(1)(B). Because the Court concludes that the second prong has not been met, it 9 does not need to address the first prong. See Marin Gen. Hosp., 581 F.3d at 947 (since 10 two prong test is in the conjunctive, both prongs need to be satisfied).

11 As to the second prong, Plaintiff asserts that his claims generally assert “that an 12 entity that acquires private personal information of an individual, as part of the entity’s 13 business, has a duty to safeguard that information. This obligation exists regardless of 14 whether an ERISA plan exists.” (Dkt. No. 24 at 12.) Therefore, he asserts a legal 15 obligation exists independent of the ERISA plan. The Court agrees.

16 Plaintiff received his health insurance through Blue Cross and Blue Cross Life, 17 (Dkt. No. 21, FAC ¶ 1), and the parties do not dispute it is an ERISA plan. Plaintiff 18 asserts an express and implied breach of contract claim. (Dkt. No. 21, FAC ¶¶ 51-56.)
19 Although the breach of an express contract cause of action references the health 20 insurance plan provided by Defendants, it does not provide any provisions of the 21 contract that was breached. A careful look at Plaintiff’s claim reveals that it does not 22 relate to benefits under the plan and does not require an interpretation of the contract 23 for purposes of benefits. See Davila, 542 U.S. at 213.

24 “No independent legal duty exists where interpretation of the terms of the 25 ERISA-regulated benefits plan forms an essential part of the claim and where the 26 defendant’s liability exists only due to its administration of the ERISA-regulated plan.”
27 Nielson v. Unum Life Ins. Co. of Amer., 58 F. Supp. 3d 1152, 1162 (W.D. Wash. 2014) 28 (quoting Davila, 542 U.S. at 213); Marin Gen. Hosp., 581 F.3d at 950 (“Since the

1 state-law claims asserted in this case are in no way based on an obligation under an 2 ERISA plan, and since they would exist whether or not an ERISA plan existed, they 3 are based on ‘other independent legal dut[ies]’ within the meaning of Davila.”).

4 § 502(a) allows a party to “recover benefits due to him under the terms of his 5 plan, to enforce his rights under the terms of the plan, or to clarify his rights to future 6 benefits under the terms of the plan.” 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(1)(B). Here, Plaintiff does 7 not seek recovery regarding benefits under the plan. As to enforcing his rights under 8 the plan, Plaintiff does not allege any express provisions of the plan that were 9 breached. Lastly, Plaintiff does not seek to clarify his rights to future benefits under 10 the plan. Plaintiff’s breach of contract claim is not based on the interpretation of the 11 plan for benefits but based on an independent duty of an entity to protect the personal 12 information of individuals if such information is required to be provided to the entity.

13 As stated by Plaintiff, the essence of the first amended complaint concerns the 14 obligation of Defendants to protect confidential and sensitive personal information 15 when such information is provided to Defendants upon enrolling in a plan. This is an 16 independent legal duty that would exist with or without the ERISA plan. See Marin 17 Gen. Hosp., 581 F.3d at 950. Accordingly, the Court concludes that since the second 18 prong has not been met, there is no complete preemption by ERISA. Therefore, 19 Defendants’ argument on complete preemption fails.

20 B. Amendment to the Complaint

21 Second, Defendants argue that the Court’s prior ruling allowing Plaintiff to 22 amend the complaint based on Weight v. Active Network, Inc., 29 F. Supp. 3d 1289, 23 1293 (S.D. Cal. 2014)⁴, is not consistent with subsequent Ninth Circuit authority. They 24 argue that federal jurisdiction is only determined at the time of removal and nothing 25 filed afterwards affects jurisdiction. They also argue that Weight was based on the 26

27 ⁴In Weight, District Judge Janis L. Sammartino concluded that the Plaintiff’s 28 revision from “residents of California” to “citizens of California” in an amended complaint was a clarification rather than an amendment. Weight v. Active Network, Inc., 29 F. Supp. 3d 1289, 1293 (S.D. Cal. June 26, 2014).

1 Ninth Circuit’s former rule that there is a strict presumption against removal. Plaintiff 2 opposes.

3 Defendants cite to Doyle v. OneWestBank, FSB, 764 F.3d 1097, 1098 (9th Cir.
4 2014), a case decided after Weight, in support but that case only addresses a general 5 proposition and does not address any of the issues in this case. In Doyle, after all 6 parties agreed to sever one plaintiff’s claim and transfer them to another court, the 7 remaining plaintiff was directed by the court to file a second amended complaint to 8 reflect the severance. Id. Then, the remaining plaintiff moved to remand the case to 9 state court under one of the exceptions to CAFA. Id. The district court granted the 10 motion to remand based on the allegations of citizenship alleged in the second amended 11 complaint. Id. The Ninth Circuit held that the district court’s determination of citizen 12 based on the second amended complaint, filed after the action had been removed, was 13 error. Id. The Ninth Circuit vacated and remanded the district court’s order remanding 14 the case to state court to allow the court to determine whether, considering the plaintiff 15 class as pleaded at the time of removal, any of the exceptions to CAFA applies. Id.
16 Doyle did not address any amendment or clarification by Plaintiff to support federal 17 jurisdiction or an exception to the rule that jurisdiction is determined at the time of 18 removal.

19 Contrary to Defendants’ assertion that there is an absolute ban on looking at 20 post-removal filings or events to determine jurisdiction, the Ninth Circuit held recently 21 that a party is allowed to amend the complaint in order to clarify certain jurisdictional 22 facts related to the “local controversy” exception to CAFA. See Benko v. Quality Loan 23 Serv. Corp., –F.3d –, 2015 WL 3772885 (9th Cir. 2015) (“Where a defendant removes 24 a case to federal court under CAFA, and the plaintiffs amend the complaint to explain 25 the nature of the action for purposes of our jurisdictional analysis [local controversy 26 exception], we may consider the amended complaint to determine whether remand to 27 the state court is appropriate.”). While the Ninth Circuit has not specifically addressed 28 clarification or amendment to facts supporting minimal diversity post-removal, it has 1 allowed post-removal amendments to clarify jurisdictional issues.

2 In addition, Defendants argue that Weight is not consistent with Dart Cherokee 3 Operation Co. LLC v. Owens, 135 S. Ct. 547, 554 (2014) where the Supreme Court
 4 held that there is no longer a strong presumption against removal jurisdiction in CAFA 5 cases. Defendants argue that since Weight stated the pre-Dart Cherokee rule on 6 presumption, then necessarily the court's ultimate conclusion fails. The Court 7 disagrees. Despite the change in presumption under Dart Cherokee for CAFA cases, 8 the presumption does not appear to have been a key factor in the ruling in Weight.

9 The Court reiterates its conclusion that the change from "residents" to "citizens" 10 of California in the class description is a clarification of the Court's jurisdiction and 11 can be the basis to amend the complaint especially in this case where the Complaint 12 alleges claims against California based Defendants, alleges only California law causes 13 of action, and the class was intended to be limited to individuals who entered into 14 contracts with California corporations for future services in California. This is even 15 acknowledged by Defendants in the Notice of Removal. (Dkt. No. 1, Notice of 16 Removal ¶ 17 ("Apparently seeking to avoid this Court's jurisdiction, the Complaint 17 does not name Anthem as a defendant.") Accordingly, Defendants' argument does not 18 compel the Court to alter its prior ruling.

19 Conclusion

20 Based on the above, the Court REMANDS the case to state court for lack of 21 subject matter jurisdiction. The hearing date set for July 17, 2015 shall be vacated.
 22 The Clerk of Court shall close the case.

23 IT IS SO ORDERED.

24
 25 DATED: July 14, 2015

26
 27 HON. GONZALO P. CURIEL
 28 United States District Judge